

DO IT YOURSELF GUIDE

Step 1 - Download the PDF and take it to a print shop like Officeworks or Staples or use your work (bonus points) or home printer.

Step 2 - Print the game on heavy white card stock (80gsm or higher). Normal copy paper is OK as well. The cards are coloured but you can print Greyscale if you want to save the world.

Step 3 - Get choppin' and cut the cards up with a big slicer, some scissors or a chainsaw if you've got one handy.

Step 4 - Get a box - the best box size is 101 x 75 x 58mm (LxWxH) which can be bought in stationery type shops or you can stuff them in an old box like the phone box you keep for when you think your phone company will replace it for free.

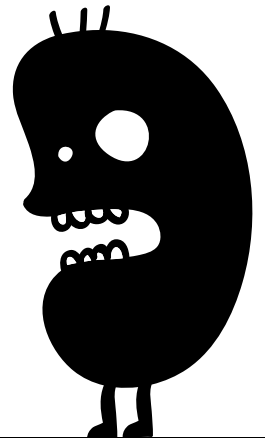

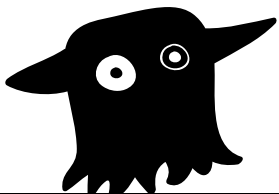

Step 5 - Open the box - and play the game. The rules are set out below.

THE GOAL

This is a game about nothing or everything, developed for people who want to yell about their 1st World Problems. The goal is to learn more about other people's miserable, insignificant but occasionally interesting lives.

Or you can just drink heavily and enjoy listening to the hell of nothingness that is modern life.

Ideal number of players is 4-10. Time required is at least 30 minutes.

BASIC RULES

To start the game the soberest person starts as the Playa, shuffles the cards and randomly deals 10 coloured question cards to each player.

The Playa then selects one of their question cards and poses the question to the players.

Players then provide their best answer to the question. The Playa can also answer.

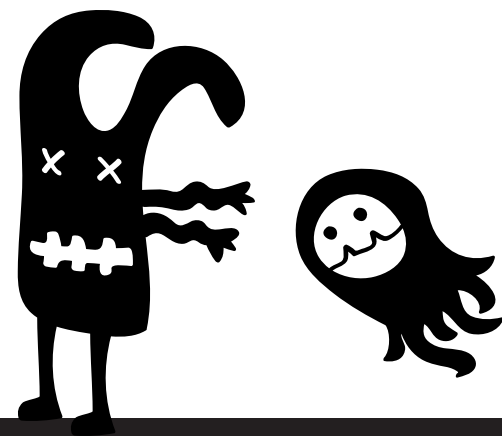

There are six exciting categories to choose from:

- Culture & Technology
- Leisure & Entertainment
- Life & Death
- Miscellaneous Hatreds
- Modern Life
- Relationships & Work

The Playa selects the best answer from the answers provided. The player with the best answer becomes the next Playa.

The Playa retains their question card. When the first 10 question cards have been played, another 5 may be drawn by all players until everyone is too bored, drunk or couldn't be bothered.

Each player's stash of cards is then tallied and the winner is the player with the most cards
